GERMAN BANK TO CONDUCT DD

German state development bank KfW is to conduct due diligence on Lilium as a potential opening to at least €100m of loan funding from both the State of Bavaria and the Federal German government. With earlier press comments suggesting some uncertainty around state funding for eVTOLs we see this as welcome news and builds on recent pre-delivery payment news.

KfW to Conduct Due Diligence

Lilium has announced that German state development bank KfW is to conduct due diligence on Lilium on behalf of the Federal Government and the State of Bavaria. This is the first stop towards federal and state guarantees providing security for a KfW loan. While the exact amount of any loan has yet to be determined the company's press release signals a minimum of €100m. It is likely to add to funding from pre-delivery payments to support Lilium's working capital position as it scales up production ahead of the targeted entry into service for the Lilium Jet in 2026. Lilium recently announced a 20 aircraft order from Urban Link for a regional network in South Florida which will include pre-delivery payments.

Removes Earlier Press Worries

The news comes after earlier press reports suggested that the Bavarian government officials had earlier prevented the approval of loan guarantees for the developer of the smaller two-seater eVTOL, Volocopter, creating some uncertainty about both state and federal level support for eVTOLs. Lilium has the potential to be a global success story for Bavaria, Germany and Europe and we are not surprised that issues appear to have been resolved.
